ACCELERATED LEARNING AND YOU

Accelerated learning is the most advanced teaching and learning method available today. It's a total system of enhancing and speeding up both the design and learning process. Many of today's leading organisations and educational institutions are benefiting from the power of accelerated learning. What makes accelerated learning so effective is that it's based on the way we naturally learn. Accelerated learning unlocks much of our potential for learning that has been left largely untapped by most conventional learning methods. It does this by actively involving the whole person, using physical activity, creativity, collaboration among learners, variety that appeals to all learning styles, contextual learning with real-world immersion, the creation of a positive physical, emotional, and social environment and other methods designed to get people deeply involved in their own learning.
